COL. HALLOWELL'S APPOINTMENTS.

Hon. J. R. Halliwell, Republican candidate for congress, will address the voters of the Seventh district at the places and dates following:

McPherson	2 p. m.	Oct 23
Lyons	2 p. m.	Oct 24
Cherokee	2 p. m.	Oct 25
Salina	2 p. m.	Oct 26
Wellington	2 p. m.	Oct 27
Arkansas	2 p. m.	Oct 28
Wichita	2 p. m.	Oct 29
Medicine Lodge	2 p. m.	Oct 30
Newton	2 p. m.	Oct 31
Great Bend	2 p. m.	Nov 1
Ellipton	2 p. m.	Nov 2
Smith Center	2 p. m.	Nov 3
Childress	2 p. m.	Nov 4

It seems to be officially understood that congress will not be called in special session. Now we can all go ahead with arrangements for Thanksgiving.

Everybody tells you that the political situation is becoming exceedingly complicated; but of course they have reference to other parties, not their own.

A Baptist clergyman of Baltimore says a man had better be a sinner than half a christian. The territory which the mug-wump can occupy is getting smaller day by day.

Col. Markham, gubernatorial candidate in California, sailed for Europe last week, thereby getting away from the gang, and in all probability increasing his chances of reelection.

Minnesota can boast of five distinct state tickets—Democratic, Republican, Farmers' Alliance, Prohibition and Loan and Building Association. This beats Kansas by one, as to name, though as to "issues" we lead the van.

The discovery of a "faust comet" is reported from Lick Observatory. If the caudal blinker had been discovered near Kansas just at this time, it would no doubt have been found to be in a state of collapse, from the excessive heat of the campaign now on.

The little old saw of "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good" finds a apt illustration in the columns of the Kansas City, Mo., Times. That paper is now publishing twenty-four pages of delinquent tax lists and sheriff's sales. That's enough, don't you think?

The territory of New Mexico has voted down a proposed state constitution containing a provision for the establishment of free schools. Yet New Mexico claims the right to be made a state. Such politics ought to and do not keep it under the control of the government for some time to come.

It is announced officially from New York that last Thursday's meeting of the Northern Pacific stockholders was the last to be held for three years to come. This practically means a vote of unlimited confidence in the present management and plants Mr. Villard on the throne of an absolute railroad monarchy.

Common gratitude on the part of Texans ought to reduce that Democratic majority. The state secured a big appropriation for the Galveston harbor and got $223,000 of the two and a half millions for public buildings. Hogg, like, however, they will probably vote to majority bigger than ever, Mill's vagaries notwithstanding.

The postal facilities of the country have in a measure kept pace with its growth and development in other respects. During the past year 4,427 new postoffices have been established and the free delivery system extended to a number of cities and towns. The department is nearer self-sustaining now than it has been in several years.

It is stated that when President Harrison was passing through "Egypt" from his recent trip to Kansas, in one of his little speeches he alluded to Illinois "crisp climate." A critic suggests that Mr. Cleveland would not have made such a "break" as that; but he forgets that Grover always had his cyclopeda handy on his trips.

The dispatches this morning announce that Governor Humphrey yesterday removed the newly appointed board of police commissioners for Leavenworth, and appointed a new board in its stead. The monkey business exhibited in this Leavenworth imbroglio is anything but creditable, to say the least, to all connected with it. It is calculated to give everybody a great big disgust with the whole matter.

The "labor" politicians of Washington, failing to attract attention by any other means fell upon the scheme of petitioning the president to appoint a woman to the supreme bench vice Justice Miller deceased. A little cheap notoriety to the politicians is all that will come of it, but that was all the movers expected or really desired. Nobody questions Elizabeth Cady Stanton's intellectual attainments and her fine sense of justice, but these, while they are essentials, are not all of the qualifications necessary to the proper discharge of the high and responsible position of a member of the court of last resort in this great nation. But it is a waste of time to seriously discuss the proposition: it will not be done, of course.

A DAMAGING STATE OF CASE.

Ordinarily the EAGLE takes but little stock in sensational campaign charges preferred against a candidate late in a campaign or on the eve of an election; they usually savor of demagoguery or political trickery and not unfrequently result in helping rather than injuring the chances of the accused. Not to pursue the subject, which is a theme for an extended dissertation on morals and ethics and so forth, we briefly apply the proposition to the case of Mr. Willis, the People's party candidate for governor, and are constrained to say that, notwithstanding what we have said, this case presents a most damaging situation for somebody. If what Willis' sister says of him is true he is unfit for decent associations; if they are not true then the sister must indeed be a depraved wretch. If the sister's allegations are based on fact, Willis is certainly devoid of honesty and of the finer feelings that should characterize the civilized and enlightened portion of the human family.

The annual report of Governor Knapp, of Alaska, recently made to the secretary of the interior, places the exports of the year at $9,840,730, or nearly $9,000,000 more than the territory cost the United States at the time of its purchase. He says that considerable activity has been manifested, but no excitement in connection with the various mining interests. The governor recommends that provisions for acquiring title to land be afforded by the general government, that mail facilities be increased, and that government hospitals be established. The sealing industry receives attention and he says of cod fishing that it is far from what it should be.

The twaddle of certain Europeans about boycotting American products should receive no serious thought by this country. Let the world learn that our prosperity is not dependent upon the caprice of any foreign power. Neither have we to consult the influences that connive at our decline as a nation. Our institutions are built upon a policy purely our own, and when as a nation we find it necessary to circumscribe our actions to meet the whims of others, we had better shut up shop. Americans will assert their individuality and demonstrate to the world the fact that they are not only the harbingers of their own happiness, but the guardians of their rights from the polar sea to the equator.

The dispatches for the past two or three days have been burdened with details of crimes of all sorts committed in all parts of the country, which would seem to sustain the theory of epidemics of crimes, as there seems to be of disasters and the like. However, the flood of this class of "news" may be accounted for in part by the absence, just at this time, of other important events and incidents worthy of special note to the public. The demand for news is universal and imperative and in the absence of a sufficient amount of a desirable and wholesome sort, other kinds must be substituted. This is not a very flattering commentary upon our social and intellectual conditions, but it is true, nevertheless.

In advocating an extra session of the legislature to re-enact the state's prohibitory laws rendered necessary by the recent decision of the federal court, the Lawrence Journal argues that "the regular session of the legislature can last but ninety days, and in that time the members would not have time to attend to this matter unless to the exclusion of other and important business." That is a specious plea. The old law that has been in force until declared null by the court was regarded sufficient to suppress the traffic, and it will not require an hour's time for the legislature in regular session to re-enact it. And if it should require half the allotted fifty days the state would probably be better off for it. As far as the public are aware or concerned there is precious little legislation necessary just now.

THE MEDICINE LODGE SUGAR MILL.

The Cresset of last week presents its readers a double column illustration of the sugar mill at Medicine Lodge and a two-column resume of the season's operations, from which we excerpt the following, which will be interesting to all who feel any concern in the progress and development of this promising and important industry:

"Herewith is presented a good picture of the Medicine Lodge sugar works, an institution of which every Barber county citizen should be proud and which stands as a living monument to the public spirit and energy of its projectors and owners. Within the outlined walls, towers, sheds, basements and grounds are now successfully carried on an industry that will eventually make this city noted. The county sought after and the farmer rich, for while the structure is now mammoth-appearing and its interior filled with a mass of complicated and expensive machinery, the institution is yet but an infant, its even unprecedented output of sugar will be produced in a few years, an experimental test compared with what may reasonably be expected when the cane producers, the mill management and the seasons all operate in harmony.

"The season, as everyone knows, was disastrous to crops generally, but especially corn. Sorghum did not escape the drought, either; but even in this dry year, every farmer who has raised cane has made money; that is, secured profitable remuneration for his time and his teams—ten times as much as if he had put his land to corn. The cane yield has probably averaged five tons per acre, at $2 per ton. The cost of raising and handling has not exceeded 75¢ per acre, so he has paid for his labor and yet netted from $2.30 to $3 per acre. Not a bad investment in a drought year. As before suggested, a good season the net yield to the farmer will be nearer $15 per acre.

"So far this season the Medicine Lodge mill has made about 400,000 pounds of sorghum sugar, and this will probably be increased to 500,000 pounds. The mill has been compelled to stop frequently for want of cane, and no day has it had all the cane it could cut. The earlier cane was light, for want of rain, and the late cane has ripened very slowly; but even the 500,000 pounds of sorghum sugar will make a good showing. The cane handled this year has been much richer in sucrose matter than that of last year, and it is believed that the results will show nearly ninety pounds of first sugar to the ton of cane.

Lon Wharton is editing the Mulhall Monitor. The last issue Wharton was identified with a newspaper in Oklahoma. Mulhall was known as Alfred.

SUNFLOWER SHIMMER.

Governor Humphrey has fired Dan Anthony in more senses than one. The papers do not have enough to say about the American hog at home. Willis denies the allegations, but he hasn't a Pat Coney to uphold him. The campaign is getting about warm enough for a Judas Iscariot to appear. The Kansas farmers are not burning corn this fall, but they are roasting apples. Some of the "hired Hessians" in Kansas couldn't locate Germany on a map for the life of the hog.

The sale of hunting in Kansas this year is said to be unparalleled. It is used largely at Alliance picnics. Rev. Dr. McCabe has come to Governor Humphrey's aid. Bernard Kelley must be overwhelmed with work.

A prominent old Kansan supports himself and family on $1 a week. His sons must be butchers and grocers. A good many of the "silver-tongued orators" of Kansas would just as soon as it wasn't for an occasional $1000. Salvini will try to vindicate Atchison from the reputation Bill Nye, the Hesse opera company and Kate Field has given it.

George Martin amuses himself by calling the old settlers of Kansas "old chaps"—that is, the old settlers on the other side. There is some curiosity as to what George T. Anthony is after now, since he has dropped the pursuit of Funston's scalp.

If the new editor of the Salina Republican doesn't want to lose his reputation he better aggravate somebody into a libel suit right away.

The Democratic papers are ungrateful. They do not even compliment Senator Plumb for not making a speech in Pennsylvania like Ingalls.

"How different Jerry Simpson will be from other congressmen when he is elected," says one of his organs that is more sincere than Joe Street.

The lie that Joe Hudson does not write any longer for the editorial page of the Topeka Capital has been nailed by the reappearance of "rum-bellions."

It is said that the calamity orators cannot find a better stump than a dilapidated, storm-beaten threshing machine, on which to denounce the evils of past legislation.

There is said to be a Halliwell's joke brewing in Governor Humphrey's office to remove the police commissioners of Leavenworth and put in an entire new batch.

J. L. Brady is out of the newspaper business and is also out in a communication over his own signature in the Barber County Herald scolding Governor Humphrey.

An out-and-out combination is still showing with great success in western Kansas. Still all the papers, both pro and con, assert that this is no time for "non-keying."

A hundred farmers in Cowley county lost all the money which they invested in an Alliance store at Winfield. This is a case where the "ninety and nine" followed the stray one off.

The Emporia Gazette, the People's party organ of Lyon county, refuses to take original package saloon advertisements. Graham and Eskridge ought to have a professional understanding.

Senator Ingalls is at Winfield today. As the weather showed signs of clearing up last night the Republican managers, who are bent on having a bright day, probably spent the night pleasantly with "iridescent dreams."

A man at Leavenworth who lives in a tent and who kept hanging therein, this motto, "Malice toward all mankind," has been indicted by the grand jury. The editor of the Leavenworth Times has a copyright on the motto.

SOUTHWESTERN KANSAS.

Prof. Horace Briggs of Mead Center, one of the pioneers of southwestern Kansas, and one of the best posted men in all this section, and withal, a clear-headed, well balanced man, in a long communication to the Commercial of Buffalo, N. Y., his former home, has this to say, among other things, of the material conditions and prospects of this country, which statements may be relied upon as accurate by any and all who may be interested in knowing the exact status of affairs, with a view to making investments or securing a home:

"Those farmers who had the grit to stick by their lands and fight against discouragements—those who were willing to work—have triumphed, and are doing much to take away the bad name given to this part of the state by adventurers. For years it was supposed that this was the natural corn belt, but four years of experiments and failures have shown that wheat, rye and barley and sorghum are much surer than corn; and these trials have also proved that horses and cattle can be raised with a trifling expense that on good government ranges further west. The buffalo grass which covers these vast uplands, is nutritious, and lasts through the year, and animals can reach it more than ten months of that period. Wheat, even when sown in culture, averages ten bushels to the acre for its maintenance under the droughts of June and July strike it. The same may be said of rye and barley. Cattle are in good condition, even after three months' lack of rain.

"In the summer and cheese factories are turning out a fine product, and at remunerative prices for the farmer who is not ashamed to work. At small expense the grower makes his molasses from the sorghum cane. Broom-corn gives fair returns, and so does alfalfa, and pig-raising when fed with molasses. The soil is rich, almost without a parallel, as is shown, when water is brought to it, either from rivers, or from artesian wells; but the crops above named, can be and are raised in paying quantities with proper culture, without irrigation.

"Monied institutions that have a claim upon this section of the state, are hoping to attract immigration by planting vast areas to wheat, thereby showing the capacity of the soil. Should they succeed in harvesting one or two fair crops, their agents will have little difficulty in securing a class of settlers who are willing to work; and this class, after all, is what is most needed. * * * The air is exhilarating, the roads are excellent, hence a drive from ten to forty miles with a team of spirited ponies is highly enjoyable. The old settlers are as diligent as the new, and Kansas would be one of the wealthiest states in the Union.

As to the Amendments. From the Kansas City Gazette. Vote for the amendment to the constitution increasing the number of supreme judges. Whether you want the legislature to worry you ninety days instead of fifty, you had better carefully consider. Many people believe that if that body was never to meet, or was limited to once in five years, business and government would be better. But everybody is entitled to a hearing in the courts, and three men cannot do the work of six.

Will Hill, the editor of the old Guthrie Geop, is engaged in the very praiseworthy work of forming a historical society to preserve the history of the territory. Ex-Chief Justice of the Cherokee, lives in a Queen Anne cottage that cost him $35,000 in cash, and handles a solid silver fork at his meals.

PRINCE E. ALI.

A large and enthusiastic audience greeted Col. Halliwell in this city last Saturday. Despite the edict of Polk, Clover and Simpson that Alliance men should not attend opposition meetings a large number of all present were members of the Alliance; and some were there who, under the teachings of the Advocate and other publications whose bible is the Seven conspiracies and similar Union labor tracts, had nearly been deceived into voting for the wild-eyed advocates of impracticable and non-sensical theories. To these Col. Halliwell's plain, sensible and practical talk was all that was necessary to dispel the illusion under which they were laboring.

The colonel's speech was a masterly effort, throughout, and showed him to be a statesman of broad and comprehensive views. He showed up the hollow sham and deceit of Jerry Simpson, and other Union Laborite manipulators of the so-called People's party in a manner to convince his audience that they were absolutely unworthy of confidence and support.

His speech was such a plain statement of facts and bore upon its face such evidence of truthfulness and candor compared with the wild vagaries of Jerry Simpson, who spoke here the previous week, that no unprejudiced person could have listened to both men without realizing the utter impracticability of the tin horn Union Laborist's scheme.

At the concluding of the colonel's speech three rousing cheers were given for Halliwell and the entire Republican ticket.

EXCHANGE SHOTS.

A Loafly Combine.

The Simpson-Lease combination in this congressional district suggests to our mind a certain common word of five syllables; not that the meaning of the word has anything in common with Jerry Simpson or Mammy Lease, but the first syllable of the word when divided into two syllables of three letters, spells the name of a beast commonly called donkey. The word is assassination.

That's Politics.

The average man votes against the candidate who thinks he can win his vote by smiling at him, and saying a few complimentary words. The average man votes against the candidate who has the most "schemes" at work for him, and against the candidate who tells the most unreasonable lies concerning his opponent. The worst feature in politics is the "schemer," who thinks he can fix an entire precinct by telling the right kind of a lie.

The Climax of Civilization.

Senator Pettigrew. Either the United States senate is more highly civilized than the Dakota legislature or it is naturally less truthful. Now, the basis and the measure of manhood among the savage tribes is truthfulness. An Indian never lies, but as civilization steals over a people they invent various methods of deceit and attain a high degree of refinement in lying. It has pretty nearly become an exact science among us now, and so civilization, it would seem, has about reached its climax.

Victor.

Edgar Ware in University Teacher.

He was a hero fighting all alone. A homesome warrior, never one more brave. Discreet, considerate and grave. He fought some noble battles; but he gave no voice to fame, and passed away unknown. So grandly to occasions did he rise, So splendidly were the victories he planned. Not all the world had asked him to command. Could it be his native valor understood—He fought himself, and winning, gained the prize.

A Lesson for Boys.

It is a true saying, but one of the old truths which man has known since the first generation, that time wasting in youth is one of the mistakes which are beyond correction.—New York World.

That reminds us of something. Two years ago a gentleman in this city bought a building lot for $300. He made a payment of $100, then he sold his two boys, aged respectively 12 and 13 years, that if they would meet the payments as they fell due until the lot was paid for they might have it. The boys have sold daily and Sunday papers, attending school, and the last payment of $30 has just been made. The boys now intend to keep their eyes open and see what can be done in the way of real estate speculation. Whether they lose their little property or make it a nucleus of a fortune remains to be seen, but the money has been made more profitably than if it had gone to the pool room. The business instinct has been sharpened, a habit of industry formed, and it is safe to say that both will one day be heavy taxpayers.

OKLAHOMA OUTLINES.

Kingfisher sees a fish. It is the capital. The old Kansan in Oklahoma must feel the want of Sam Wood sadly. The champion cotton-picker of Oklahoma still abides in obscurity.

The New World calls Kingfisher the Turned Bird of the times. It is possible that Bill Hackney is hiding out.

A two-thirds majority is the only thing able to file a contest on the gubernatorial veto.

Most of the people in Guthrie now spend their night dreaming of two-third majorities.

Nobody has made any attempts yet at preserving the old Abilene trail in Oklahoma.

Hennessy wishes Kingfisher good luck in the capital squabble. That is the proper spirit.

To a man up the tree in Oklahoma—there isn't any man up the tree in Oklahoma.

Lexington has a bowling alley—presumably for people who are afraid to drink in the street.

The editor of the Noble Democrat has burst a blood vessel, but not over the capital question.

The Oklahoma City papers can not claim Governor Steele went around that town to come to Kansas.

him $35,000 in cash, and handles a solid silver fork at his meals.

Representative Peery's mother heard that he was in danger and came all the way from Missouri to protect him. A man with a mother like that can't help being good.

Judge Shackelford has ruled in the court at Ardmore that a negro with Indian blood would not be allowed to sit on a jury in criminal cases, but would be allowed in civil cases.

Rev. Foster of Stillwater, has received a $20 donation to the Congregational church fund from the Hon. Redfield Proctor, secretary of war. Mr. Proctor and Rev. Foster were college classmates.

Matthews, the candidate for congress, was a member of the convention which nominated "Blue Jean Williams" for governor of Indiana. But that probably wouldn't hurt him any in President Harrison's eyes.

There is lots of fun in frontier life after all. J. V. Admire and family and J. W. McLeod and wife were caught in the rain last Sunday afternoon between Guthrie and Kingfisher and all put up in a dug out over night.

Hamlin Sawyer: The climate of Oklahoma is simply delightful. The heat during the summer is somewhat oppressive, but it is forgotten during the refreshing nights. The autumn is perfection itself. The long gloriously beautiful, sunshiny days, with just a touch of coolness in the air, inspire and invigorate the body. The winter is cool enough to give zest to life, but we have none of the rigors of a northern climate.

LEWIS VS. LEWIS.

Judge Sharpe had just tied together a bundle of legal papers and thrust them into a pigeon hole when the young man came in. "How are you, my boy? Sit down. What can I do for you today? I've just got the end of a case which ought to be a lesson to all young fellows," said the judge, all in one breath, as was his manner.

"What case was that, judge?" asked Loring as he dropped into a chair. "Lewis vs. Lewis, action for a limited divorce on the ground of incompatibility, cruel treatment, and so forth. You saw the young woman who was in state all objections they might interpose. You hear and read a great deal about the tyranny of parents who refuse to sanction marriages which they believe will end in unhappiness; but I tell you, my boy, that what is called matrimony is in many cases but a common sense and good judgment based on experience and observation."

"Well, they were married and for a short time they were happy. Then the young wife began to be discontented. She missed the luxuries she had been accustomed to enjoy. The modest house her husband could provide for her was so different from the elegance with which she had been formerly surrounded, she began to fret. Her discontent soon found expression in words. Naturally her husband became angered at what he considered her lack of devotion. He no longer turned and smiled as the young girl spoke, and the light streaming upon his face showed it to be indeed a mirror of everything gloomy and disheartening."

"It isn't a law case that is troubling me, I would it were only that," he replied, with a sigh that was almost a groan. "What is it then? Has any misfortune befallen you?" "Yes, a misfortune indeed; or at least it seems to be now. Doubtless it is all for the best."

"What are you talking about? Why don't you tell me what is troubling you?" "I came for that purpose, that I might tell you. After this evening we must not meet again."

"Not—meet—again?" Nellie Sharpe repeated the words slowly, as if she could not grasp their full meaning. The color crept to her cheeks and then receded, leaving her very pale.

"What do you mean, Walter? What has happened? You cannot be in earnest."

Walter rather incoherently recounted what Judge Sharpe had told him of the case of Lewis vs. Lewis, and the comments he had made on that case.

"And is that all?" asked Nellie, when he had finished. She smiled a little as she asked the question, and a close observer would have noticed that a sigh of relief passed her lips.

"All? Is it not too much? Knowing that your father holds this view can I do otherwise than give you up?"

"I thought you had more pluck," said the young girl, with just a suggestion of scorn in her voice.

"It is not a matter of courage, but of conscience, of honor. Can I go to the man who gives me such advice as I have received, who tells me never to marry a woman who is beyond my station financially, and ask him to give me his daughter, who is dearer to him than all else? I am poor; I have none but the most problematical prospects; while you—well, I need not say more, you can readily see my position."

"But I can't see it in the light in which you place it. I thought you had sufficient faith in me not to believe that I would do such a dreadful woman did of whom my father told you. Your prospects are certainly better than your present ones. Furthermore, my father would yield to my wishes."

"I do not lack faith in you; heaven knows how strong that faith is; but because I would feel that I had acted treacherously toward one who has been my best friend if I held you to your promise that I had decided to do that which will take all happiness out of my life."

"Probably it never occurred to you that the happiness of any one else might suffer if I am not considered at all."

"You will soon forget, you will be happier than I could ever make you."

"Oh! certainly, we women forget so easily; it is only the men that remember; only the hearts of men that are broken. However, since you wish it so, it is not for me to object."

"It is not what I wish; it is what I must do."

"But suppose I should refuse to accept your decision; suppose I should assert my rights? Suppose I should insist at least on your trying for a term of years to bring your financial condition up to what you consider the proper standard?"

"It would be wrong to keep you bound by a promise to one who would have to struggle perhaps for years, and might fail at last."

"See it is vain to reason with one who is unreasonable; it shall be as you wish."
